ANSWERS

Prioritize - Find out which classes have finals and then determine which ones will be the most difficult. Plan to study more for difficult finals.

Start Talking - Start talking to classmates, teachers, and everyone else. Ask classmates if they want to study together. Chances are they will - and find out if you can exchange notes. Ask around to see what former students have to say about the final.

Conquer Procrastination - It's a tough, battle, but it can be done. Try breaking down larger, more daunting tasks into 15 minute sessions. Try to keep yourself on a schedule, and take short breaks in between.

Be Good to Yourself - Make sure you get plenty of sleep (at least 7 hours). Also be sure to get some physical exercise - it can boost brain power! Bring your class material with you to work out and look at it while on a treadmill.

Get organized - Make a schedule of everything going on up until your last final. Schedule studying times and be sure to acknowledge which classes need more time. But just as importantly, plan time to indulge yourself outside of studying.

Think Positively - if you can see yourself doing well, you are more likely to be successful.

Relax - Arrive about 5 minutes early to your test and instead of cramming, which can confuse you, simply relax.

PS - Don't forget your Standard #2 Pencil!
